ACTOR IS JAILED FOR SEX ATTACKS

By Russ Lawrence

russ.lawrence@nlhnews.co.uk

AN actor from Wood Green who has appeared in popular TV shows Broadchurch and Grantchester has been jailed for sexually assaulting two sleeping women.

Nyakeh Kpaka, 26, of Gladstone Avenue, was branded a "dangerous sexual predator" for attacking the women at house parties in Finsbury Park and in Blackheath, south-east London, six months apart, after each of them had gone to bed.

He was sentenced to eight years in prison at Woolwich Crown Court on Tuesday last week.

Kpaka was at the house party in Blackheath in May last year when he got into a bed where a woman was asleep and sexually assaulted her twice.

She ran from the bedroom screaming and police were called.

A second woman then came forward to say that Kpaka had attacked her at a house party in Finsbury Park in December 2014.

She had barely spoken to him and did not know him before that night.

Kpaka – also known as Nakay Kpaka – featured in the second season of ITV crime drama Broadchurch, which starred David Tennant and Olivia Colman, as Jonah Bishop, the imprisoned son of QC Sharon Bishop, played by Marianne Jean-Baptiste.

Kpaka denied the Finsbury Park attack and claimed contact with the woman in Blackheath had been consensual – but a jury found him guilty of three counts of sexual assault by penetration.

After the conviction, Detective Constable Peter Thompson said: "Kpaka is a dangerous sexual predator who has attacked vulnerable lone women while they were sleeping in bed at two different house parties."

"Thankfully, he has now been caught and convicted and is serving a prison sentence."

"I would like to take this opportunity to thank those present at the parties who came to the assistance of the victims and the victims themselves, who showed a great degree of courage to report these offences and give evidence against Kpaka."

Jailed: Former Broadchurch actor Nyakeh Kpaka

Rise in number of asylum children

THE number of unaccompanied asylum-seeking children supported by Haringey has increased to 46, up from 31 in January.

The number includes three children who arrived from Calais under the Dubs Amendment, a law that was passed in May 2016 and allows unaccompanied children to be offered safe refuge in the UK.

For information about becoming a foster carer in Haringey, call 020 8690 9010 or 0800 112 3644 or email info@haringeyfostering.co.uk

Fire tragedy probe

A MAN died after flames ripped through a house converted into flats in Tottenham on Sunday morning.

The body of the victim, who has yet to be named, was found in a flat on the ground floor of the house in Grove Park Road. He was pronounced dead at the scene.

The fire brigade were called just after 8.30am and 14 firefighters and two engines from Tottenham fire station attended the blaze. The fire was brought under control by 9.30am.

A quarter of the flat was badly-damaged. The cause of the fire is being investigated.

Julia joins youngsters for Pudsey moneybox launch

TV presenter Julia Bradbury joined primary school pupils to unveil the new limited edition Pudsey moneybox at the Wood Green Lloyds Bank branch as part of the BBC Children in Need appeal.

The bear-shaped moneybox is for sale in Lloyds branches for £5, with every penny going to the charity, which benefits disadvantaged children across the UK.

The boxes will be on offer nationally in the run-up to this year's televised appeal on Friday, November 18.

Jen Brodtkin,

headteacher at Osidge Primary School, in Southgate, said: "The children were very excited to see the Pudsey Moneybox first-hand and we spent the day turning the branch spotty and developing spotty fundraising ideas as part of The Big Spotaclur for BBC Children in Need. Last year, Lloyds Bank raised £260,000 for Children in Need and sold 57,000 of the boxes, which come with a mini-whiteboard and pen.

Julia Bradbury said: "The new Pudsey Moneybox provides an adorable and fun way for the public to donate to BBC Children in Need."

Tories blast delay to extra policing

'Shocked': Joanna Laban

By Clare Casey

newsdesk@nlhnews.co.uk

EXTRA police support is being drafted in to tackle crime on housing estates.

Officers began patrolling at the start of September and are based on estates where higher levels of criminal and anti-social behaviour, including drug use, have been reported.

But Tories on Enfield Council have criticised the local authority after it was revealed that the introduction of the 16 extra officers was delayed by six months as a result of red tape.

Funding for the officers – paid for by the council and supplied by the Metropolitan Police and the Mayor's Office for Policing and Crime was approved in April – but bureaucracy meant that they are only now patrolling the estates.

Joanne Laban, the Conservative group's deputy leader, said: "I am shocked and dismayed that due to the council the borough was without its extra police resource.

"I know this is an extra resource in addition to the Metropolitan Police provision, but the loss of officers down to bureaucracy is just not on.

"The decision by the council was made in April to enter into a new contract, but it was only signed off last month meaning a gap in provision for six months.

"It is unforgivable that this has happened."

A council spokeswoman admitted that there had been a six-month delay but stressed: "We were unable to proceed until both the MPS and MOPAC had agreed the terms of the contract."

The teams will supplement the work of the existing ward officers, and take part in additional police patrols.

Krystle Fonyonga, the council's cabinet member for community safety and public health, said: "Over recent years there have been central government cuts to budgets for police services across London and the country.

"Supporting a safe Enfield is a priority for this council and so we are paying for these officers from our own limited funds to help the lives of our residents who live on some of our most difficult estates."

Superintendent Carl Robinson, who is based at Edmonton police station, in Fore Street, said: "This is a really encouraging initiative from the council which we positively promote."

Burrowes leads fight to stop extradition

ENFIELD Southgate MP David Burrowes has led fellow parliamentarians in calling on President Obama to prevent the extradition of Lauri Love, the alleged computer hacker.

The open letter, signed by more than 100 MPs, follows questions posed by Mr Burrowes to the Prime Minister in parliament last week.

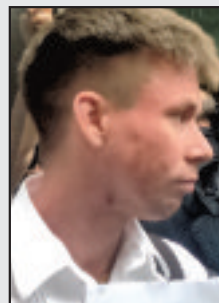

Mr Love, 31, pictured right, who has Asperger's syndrome, is accused of hacking into key American institutions, including the FBI, NASA and the Federal Reserve bank. In September, a judge sitting in Westminster Magistrates' Court ruled that Mr Love could be extradited to the United States.

Mr Burrowes successfully supported the campaign to prevent the extradition of Gary McKinnon, who was also accused of hacking into American state systems.

Following his case, the then Home Secretary Theresa May introduced a forum bar to limit the situations in which extradition can take place.

Mr Love's lawyers

believe that he faces a likely sentence of 99 years if he is tried in America over alleged crimes that would attract a maximum penalty of a few years in prison if found guilty in the UK.

Mr Love has suffered lifelong depression and is considered at great risk of taking his own life, if incarcerated away from his family.

He does not believe he would receive justice in the United States, he told the court earlier this year.

He said: "Sadly, what I expect [in an American prison] are the urges, the depression, the helplessness ... I will exercise what remains of my self-control and I will take my life."

That's the way to do it: Market trader James Crowther demonstrates what is meant by apple bobbing

Bob's your uncle

THERE was a barrel load of fun at Enfield market on Saturday as dozens of youngsters enjoyed the age-old custom of apple bobbing.

And market worker James Crowther was overjoyed, having held a trial run earlier last week during which many youngsters spurned the chance to have a go because they didn't have a clue what the tradition of apple bobbing was about.

The 53-year-old, who organises arts and crafts near the band stand, was delighted at the weekend as youngsters were eager to have a go at plunging their faces into the barrel of water to retrieve the floating apples without using their hands.

"There was a lot of enthusiasm from the children," said James, who is a volunteer for the Old Enfield Charitable Trust, which runs the market every Thursday and Saturday.

"It was like a pied piper exhibition. It was just great. Once they got the hang of how to play they kept taking it in turns and watching each other."

James had previously been met with mystified stares from children and parents last week when he invited them to have a go because they hadn't heard of the custom and didn't know what they were expected to do.

He is extending the activity for another week in the hope that more children will learn about the tradition and take part.

The game is now more widely celebrated during autumn when apples are harvested.

However, the tradition goes back hundreds of years when it was used to determine whether a courting couple were the right match.

There were variations of the game. One involved a woman bobbing for the apple which had been selected by her potential partner – and if she caught it first time, then it symbolised true love.

"I was extremely surprised that so many people hadn't heard of apple bobbing, but I hope to introduce more traditional games to children and parents at the market," added James.

'I had had my fill of politics'

Former Enfield Southgate MP Portillo has no regrets

By Russ Lawrence

russ.lawrence@nlhnews.co.uk

HE doesn't need reminding of the infamous "Portillo moment" when, as a Conservative cabinet minister, he lost what was considered the safe Enfield Southgate seat to Labour's relatively unknown candidate Stephen Twigg.

It was a defining moment in the 1997 general election and has since become a metaphor for a dramatic swing in political fortunes.

But Michael Portillo, the 63-year-old ex-politician, broadcaster and presenter, is far from dismayed by the experience, choosing to reminisce and poke fun at himself when he brings his An Audience With-style show to Wyllotts Theatre, in Potters Bar, on Saturday night.

Titled A Game of Two Halves, it is a fascinating collection of amusing tales and anecdotes about his life.

The first half deals with his long political career, with positions in both Margaret Thatcher and John Major's governments from the mid-1980s through to the mid-1990s. He tells yarns about Mrs Thatcher, whom he admits was "formidable".

As a potential party leader who was once tipped as a future Prime Minister, Mr Portillo bowed out of politics in 2005 and says he doesn't miss it and has no desire to return.

"I was never that ambitious about climbing up the greasy pole. I had held several cabinet posts and had had my fill. I left voluntarily because I didn't enjoy being in opposition," he explains.

The other half deals with his new-found celebrity status as a historian and TV presenter of the BBC series Great British Railway Journeys.

The evening also includes a question and answer session during which the audience can put him on the spot.

A staunch Eurosceptic, he says he is cautiously optimistic about Brexit – believing the euro is doomed and that the rich countries of the continent will get to the point where free movement of people can no longer be sustained, while the poorer countries will no longer be able to afford to lose their talented young.

And he is probably best placed to give an insightful comment on the American presidential election, having just spent the summer filming the Great American Railway Journeys for the Beeb.

"It is difficult to understand," he says. "More than 70 per cent of Americans distrust Hillary Clinton, so it's hard to see how she would govern should she win, and they distrust Trump even more. It shows the disillusionment and distrust with the political establishment."

Linda bids to help talented pupils

DIZZY blonde TV reality star Linda Lambert, from the popular auction show, Storage Hunters, has made a successful bid to become patron of an Enfield school teaching youngsters the performing arts.

The second hand dealer visited the Platinum Performing Arts School to see their weekly rehearsals at Millfield Theatre, in Silver Street, Edmonton, on Sunday.

Linda, who lives in Enfield, was inspired to meet the youngsters after seeing a TV news report about one of the pupils, Dylan O'Mahony-Dawe, 11, after he was chosen as one of pop star Justin Bieber's backing dancers at one of his recent 02 concerts.

"I heard that he was from the arts school in Edmonton and thought it amazing, so I really wanted to meet the children," said Linda.

"I'm glad I did because I felt that I really connected with them," she added.

Linda said she had made it her "mission" to raise money to buy a minibus for the pupils.

"I'm going all out," she said. "They can even name the bus after me – just as long as my name is on the front and not the back," she joked.

While on her visit

she met the pupils and watched them rehearse for their annual Christmas pantomime, which will be on at Millfield.

The children were equally impressed with Linda, who found fame from the TV programme, which will chalk up its sixth series when it is aired next year.

There will also be a Storage Hunters celebrity special this month to raise money for charity with celebrities including former Pussycat Doll Kimberly Wyatt and actor Jimi Mistry.

"The youngsters said they love Storage Hunters," added Linda.

Patron: Storage Hunters' Linda Lambert with pupils from Platinum Performing Arts

"The thing about the programme is that it is for the whole family. We may bicker a bit, but there isn't any swearing."

Roy Hart, business development manager at Platinum Performing Arts said he was thrilled that Linda would be helping to raise money for the school.

"It's brilliant," he said.

"She was over the moon to visit us and said she wants to give back to the community, which is really positive."

A Super day out

By Clare Casey

A LAMBORGHINI once owned by rock star Sir Rod Stewart got car enthusiasts all revved up at a classic car show at Alexandra Palace at the weekend.

The Italian supercar, bought by the singer in 1971, went under the hammer for more than £900,000 at the Classic and Sports Car Show's first classic car sale.

Thousands of enthusiasts and visitors from all over the world flocked to the three-day extravaganza, which ended on Sunday.

It was the second staging of the annual event at Alexandra Palace.

Petrolheads were met with a feast of classic cars to view as the cream of dealers and specialists from the UK and Europe displayed vehicles from every era of motoring history.

Chris Routledge, of Coys, auction house, said: "We were absolutely delighted with the auction.

"The room at Alexandra Palace was packed throughout and, in total we've achieved more than £4million worth of sales."

Veteran sports car driver John Fitzpatrick kept the crowds entertained with tales of racing Porsches during his illustrious endurance career during the 1970s and 1980s.

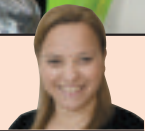

He also revealed how he played a part in discovering a young Lewis Hamilton after witnessing the now three-time Formula 1 world champion racing karts as a child.

Other highlights included watching a Jaguar XK120 as it was restored and many stalls selling collectables and memorabilia.

Trailblazers: Five-year-old friends Sarina Riaz and Ava Jackson at Forty Hall on Sunday

HAUNTED happenings led children along a spooky mystery trail at Forty Hall on Sunday.

Youngsters worked in groups to solve the clues of the Halloween story at the 17th-century mansion in Forty Hill, Enfield.

Mysterious characters chanting rhymes greeted visitors – such as the highwayman and ghost servant. Children had to reach into old chamber pots and saucepans full of pretend slugs and creepy crawlies to retrieve the clues to the next room.

At the end of the trail they were led outside to the Black Barn at Forty Hall Farm where they were met by the highwayman with his horse Wallace.

After they solved the mystery they won a pumpkin out of which they carved spooky faces.

"It was a fun activity," said Helen Hamlyn, education and learning outreach officer at Forty Hall. "The children got into the story and engaged really well."

YouTube star Nikki is truly inspirational

By Clare Casey

newsdesk@nlhnews.co.uk

THE extraordinary courage of an Enfield girl who helped millions by sharing her story on YouTube has won her a prestigious award.

Twelve-year-old Nikki Christou was diagnosed with a potentially life-threatening condition which left her with a severe facial disfigurement at the age of six.

But where many people would have shut themselves away from the world, the YouTube star shared her story, beauty and baking tips, winning herself millions of online fans.

On Monday night the vlogger won a Child of Courage accolade at the Pride of Britain Awards – broadcast on ITV last night.

Her dad George Christou, 50, said: "Nikki had a wonderful evening. She swapped make-up tips with Candice Brown (Bake Off winner) and Mary Berry. Jamie Oliver said he wants to do some kind of cooking collaboration with Nikki, which is very exciting.

"She was gracious and funny, as always. There wasn't a dry eye in the house."

Nikki's life changed forever when she and her parents noticed veins popping up on the right side of her face.

She was diagnosed with arteriovenous malformation (AVM), a rare health condition – which leaves sufferers with an "abnormal connection" between their arteries and veins and causes intense pain and life-threatening nosebleeds.

She underwent 30 operations and was unable to run around for fear of raising her blood pressure, leaving her a prisoner in her own home.

Mr Christou said: "It was awful. No child should have to suffer the way Nikki has. It started with nosebleeds, then bleeding from her mouth and eyes. But these bleeds are so severe they are life-threatening.

"It robbed her of her childhood. She would watch out of the window unable to play with her friends."

Brave: Nikki Christou with Jamie Oliver, Candice Brown and Mary Berry after picking up her award on Monday night

Nikki said: "It was a shock because at that age I didn't have a care in the world. I felt quite lonely because after it was diagnosed my friends still didn't have a care in the world while I had to give up a lot of clubs and activities. I didn't go to school very often and I felt isolated."

Two years after her diagnosis, Nikki set up her YouTube channel, Nikki Lily, where she shares make-up tips and baking tutorials with her loyal fan base.

She has become a social media star, inspiring fans across the world, some with the same condition and thousands who simply love her positive attitude.

With more than 120 videos so far, each new show tends to chalk up more than 500,000 views.

Nikki said: "It's amazing I have so many followers. I'm not going to lie and say it doesn't get me down or make me angry.

"But you can either be negative and not enjoy life, or you can be positive and block out all the negativity in your life and live a lovely, healthy, joyful and happy life."

Through her charity, Butterfly AVM, Nikki has also raised almost £400,000 for research into AVM at Great Ormond Street Hospital, where she has been treated, and University College Hospital London.

Mr Christou added: "Nikki is an amazing, special, wonderful girl and a real story of triumph through adversity."

Consultation set to find protection order spaces

AN online consultation is focusing on public attitudes to anti-social behaviour across the borough of Enfield. The survey will address concerns including aggressive charity collectors, the use of legal highs and the flying of drones. It will also enable Enfield Council to identify areas that are likely to benefit from a Public Spaces Protection Order. PSPOs are a legal measure created by the Anti-Social Behaviour, Crime and Policing Act 2014 and offer protection against specific nuisances in defined areas, in addition to existing criminal sanctions. Breaching one can attract a £100 fixed penalty notice, with a maximum fine of £1,000 if it is not paid. Cabinet member for community safety and public health Krystle Fonyonga said: "PSPOs will give the council the opportunity to take firm action against anti-social behaviour, some of which borders on criminal activity." PSPOs could be used to target borough-wide behaviour, as well as specific orders to cover parks, open spaces, council estates and associated land. The council and the police are authorised to enforce PSPOs. Ms Fonyonga added: "Introducing them in certain areas will create a powerful deterrent for wrongdoers and will help us to address the type of unacceptable behaviour we simply don't want to see in Enfield." Daniel Anderson, cabinet member for environment, said: "Anti-social behaviour blights residents' lives and we receive regular demands that we take action to address it." The consultation finishes on November 28. Residents can give their views by visiting www.enfield.gov.uk/ and searching for consultations.

Taking firm action: Krystle Fonyonga

We want to hear your views about our proposed changes to the Paediatric Assessment Unit at Chase Farm Hospital.

Enfield Clinical Commissioning Group is proposing to close the Paediatric Assessment Unit at Chase Farm Hospital and introduce a different model of care which will deliver better care for children.

The consultation closes on Sunday 15 January 2017.

Council's housing firm snaps up 200th home

THE housing company which provides short-term accommodation on behalf of Enfield Council has bought its 200th property and is looking to make more acquisitions. Between March 2014, when it was set up, and March this year, the council-owned Housing Gateway has saved the local authority £1million by providing alternatives to emergency bed and breakfast for homeless families. Half of Housing Gateway properties are two, three and four-bedroom former council homes bought under the Right To Buy scheme. Families are given an assured short-hold tenancy as well as help to find longer term, cheaper accommodation. Dino Lemonides, Housing Gateway board member and the council's cabinet member for finance and efficiency, said: "Between 2010 and 2015 we needed to make budget reductions of £118m and we still need to find a further £56m of savings by 2019/20 because of continuing reductions on central government funding." Fellow board member and cabinet member for housing and housing regeneration Ahmet Oyken said: "This is a practical, effective and intelligent response to serious budget pressures and I am delighted we have been able to find an effective solution to an incredibly taxing problem."

Edmonton all over: The ambulance station crew captured by Dan Sundahl

Getting into the art of Edmonton

Ambulance crew is Canadian's latest work

By Priya Kingsley-Adam

priya.kingsley-adam@nlhnews.co.uk

PARAMEDICS at Edmonton ambulance station have been immortalised by a firefighter from Edmonton in Canada who creates art which features the work of the world's emergency services.

Dan Sundahl, whose full-time job is as a firefighter and paramedic in Edmonton, Alberta, travelled the 4,000 miles to London during the summer.

The globetrotter specialises in making artworks of police, ambulance and fire crews, digitally enhancing and colouring the original print until it resembles a hand-painted image.

The effect is stunning and has earned him world renown, especially among emergency services in Europe and Asia as well as north and south America.

Charlotte Wright, a paramedic at the ambulance station in Windmill Road, Edmonton [north London], who follows Daniel's artwork on Facebook, heard he was making his first trip to the UK and invited him to the station so he could produce a piece of art featuring the crew there.

"The photo session was great," said Daniel. "I was able to meet some fellow paramedics who were on shift and capture a group photo with them."

He spent 10 days in London and also photographed other members of the London Ambulance Service.

"I really enjoyed my time in London and at the Edmonton station," he added.

"London's medical services are similar in a lot of ways to Canada, but I learned a few things that I may try to implement within my own service."

Daniel says he uses his artwork as "therapy" for his job which helps to "purge" often distressing scenes from his memory and turn them into artistic creations.

"I try to capture an emotional element in my artwork that goes beyond the image itself," he explained.

"I'm truly humbled by all the attention my work has received and I'm sure I'll keep creating until I'm old and cranky."

Despite repeated requests, London Ambulance Service were unable to provide a comment from Edmonton ambulance station.

MP and council clash over caring for refugee children

MP David Burrowes has made renewed calls for Enfield to stop sitting on its hands and let in vulnerable refugees being dispersed from Calais.

As thousands of desperate migrants poured out of the squalid Jungle camp, the Tory MP for Enfield Southgate said it was time to act.

Speaking on Radio 4 and in parliament last week as the operation to demolish the camp began, Mr Burrowes urged local authorities – in particular his own – to do more.

He said: "Considering the government has now made it crystal clear that the UK must prioritise the safety and security of children who are eligible for resettlement to the UK, I am disappointed that Enfield Council is not following other London councils in providing places for child refugees following relocation schemes."

Mr Burrowes, who sits on the Commons Home Affairs Select Committee, raised concerns that planned shelters would be insufficient to accommodate all child refugees should the French authorities fail to accept the French Red Cross offer of a children's centre.

He urged local authorities to deliver on their commitment to take their fair share of vulnerable children who have a legal right to be in the UK.

Enfield has additionally accepted 70 unaccompanied asylum seeking children – Hillingdon has so far taken 110 and Croydon has taken 430 – but has yet to take any under the Vulnerable Persons Resettlement Scheme.

However, cabinet member for education, children's services and protection Ayfer Orhan rejected his claims and urged him to check his facts, saying Enfield was "ready and waiting".

"I am very disappointed that Mr Burrowes didn't check his facts with us first," she said. "Enfield has taken a very high number of children seeking asylum."

"Once the government has sorted out the paperwork for the children at Calais, we are ready and waiting to take more."

Mr Burrowes immediately responded: "The paperwork has been sorted. The clock is ticking. When is Enfield going to honour its promise?"

YEARS OF CARE

Crescent Road, Enfield, Middlesex EN2 7BL

ESTABLISHED 1970

Columnist

Doug Taylor

Enfield Council leader

MAKE no apologies for returning to the issue of the inadequate government funding for Enfield. Each and every one of us gets a raw deal from the scandalous shortfall in funding compared with some other parts of London.

While our funding is below £500 per head some inner London boroughs get more than £900 per head. Our ability to make a positive difference and adequately fund our services is therefore inevitably compromised.

As our population rises above the average population increases, children's services and adult social care are having ever increasing demands on them and the cost of meeting our housing legal duties are increasing. The inequities of government grant distribution is short-changing every single resident in Enfield.

As a council we continue to find innovative ways to improve and minimise the effect of the 49 per cent cut to our funding since 2010 and a further £56million to be found by 2020 – but the impact of not even cutting from the real grant we should get, but from the unequal grant we do get, makes Enfield particularly badly hit, with £100m lost over ten years.

We need everyone in the borough to get behind the campaign to give Enfield a fair share of funding so we can protect the sick and vulnerable, invest in the future and improve our quality of life.

I am particularly indebted to the Over 50s Forum who have launched a petition at <https://www.change.org/p/enfield-borough-over-50s-forum-fairer-funding-for-enfield>. Like me, they see the unfairness of the current system – and this has cross-party support in the council.

Time to end secrecy and ignorance about adoption

YOUR article ("The most rewarding thing I've ever done", Advertiser, October 19) spoke of a woman's decision to adopt.

As a birth mother who felt obliged to give up my first child for adoption in 1963, I have nothing but admiration for what she has done.

Nonetheless, I think it is important to point out that many adoptions today break down – perhaps one in five, or more, and the child, already damaged by previous experiences, then enters a nightmare world of moving from one temporary placement to another, with the fear of further rejection becoming a self-fulfilling prophecy as testing out behaviour becomes more and more desperate.

But National Adoption Week is itself a reminder, for the original parents, of the pain and grief caused by their own loss.

Many people have forgotten or perhaps are too young to know about the situation in the years from the 1950s until the 1980s when many women were coerced into agreeing to adoption simply because they were not married.

These women often suffered years of depression and grief, made worse by the secrecy of it all, and many never had any more children.

There is now a campaigning group –

MAA, Movement for an Adoption Apology – which seeks a parliamentary apology for past adoption practices. Above all, we want to remove the secrecy and ignorance which still surround this issue.

And as to today's adoptions, the situation is hardly any less bleak as we see more pressure than ever from a government wanting to increase the number of adoptions while at the same time systematically reducing the services which could help vulnerable families to survive intact.

The answer's blowing in the wind, it seems

I, LIKE many other Enfield residents, have no trees in my front garden, but during autumn and winter months there are an enormous number of leaves appearing in my front garden and garden path, often very dangerous to visitors.

This usually causes local residents to fill our green bins weekly with green waste from our front gardens and pathways as well as public footways abandoned by regular council refuse workers.

As I presume these leaves belong to Enfield Council, honest residents should not hold on to them and should simply put them in sacks and take them to the civic centre where no doubt highly qualified forensic staff can do tests on them to determine exactly where they originate from and exactly who owns each leaf in a friendly spirit of returning them to their actual owners.

However, surely it would be make more sense if the council continues with weekly collections to avoid such complicated legal arguments as to where such leaves originate from and exactly who owns them?

In the words of Bob Dylan, "The answer my friend is blowing in the wind", unless the council would like to net all council trees to ensure that council leaves do not blow into the front gardens and pathways of residents.

Or perhaps we should just call the police to come and collect such leaves as no honest resident would ever want to be accused of stealing them!

Another solution to this could be if the council enclosed each of its trees to ensure it was impossible for the leaves to escape into residents' gardens.

D Bloom
Chase Road,
Southgate

□ If a service has to be sacrificed, why can't the black refuse bin be collected fortnightly instead of the green one?

If people were more conscientious about recycling, they would not produce anywhere near the amount of rubbish that is generated at present. I only put my black bin out every other week on average and even then its rarely full.

Whereas the green one is filled every week with garden cuttings, mowed grass etc especially during spring and summer when foliage grows more quickly and kitchen waste would smell badly if only collected every two weeks.

Stephen May
The Drive,
Enfield

□ Well said Rick Jewell ("It's up to all of us to tackle the fly-tippers", Advertiser, October 19) and well done in his fight against rubbish on our streets.

For four years my neighbours and I have tried and tried to eliminate the rubbish dumped at the top of Carterhatch Road. We have taken photographs, phoned the council, delivered evidence to the civic centre etc.

During a recent visit from American friends I felt so ashamed that this is what we live with all the time.

A camera was installed at one stage, but was only in situ for a few weeks. What else can we do to rid ourselves of this constant filth?

Asbestos story made me think

READING your headline about the lady who died of asbestos exposure ("Lawyers probe asbestos death, Advertiser, October 12) brought memories about my late husband Brian. He also died of asbestos exposure.

For three years, he suffered this dreadful disease. He was a carpenter and joiner. He worked with many companies and worked all over the country.

I contacted a solicitor trying to get some recognition or compensation, but because he had worked all over the country he could not identify the actual job where he picked up the asbestos fibres.

After he died I took this up again with solicitors, but got nowhere as they could not find any proof of which company he was working for at the time he picked it up.

I also worked with asbestos at a firm in Enfield. I am free of asbestosis at the moment, but who knows what the future will hold?

Do not ignore the symptoms

THROUGHOUT Breast Cancer Awareness Month in October, there were constant reminders for women to check their breasts – but, as the awareness campaign comes to an end for another year, I urge your readers to remember that symptoms can occur at any time.

A third of women aren't checking their breasts regularly and a fifth say it's because they don't know how. The good news is, there is no "correct" way. It's about making sure you look at and feel your breasts regularly in a way that's comfortable for you – perhaps in the shower, or while getting dressed.

Everyone's breasts are different, but if anything isn't normal for you, get it checked out with your GP. Most changes may not be cancer, but if there is a problem, reporting the symptoms early can lead to more effective treatment.

So, please, don't forget to keep checking your breasts regularly whatever your age and if you have any concerns at all, call Breast Cancer Care free on 0800 808 6000.

Award winner: Jack Abrey with the government's minister for civil society Rob Wilson

By Fiona O'Cleirigh

newsdesk@nlhnews.co.uk

AN Enfield Scout has been congratulated by the Prime Minister after being named a Point of Light for his exceptional volunteering efforts.

The awards recognise outstanding and inspiring individual contributions to community change.

Nineteen-year old Jack Abrey is chairman of the Scouts Community Impact Group and has led the A Million Hands initiative, which targets social causes linked to dementia, disability, mental health and clean water and sanitation.

In a letter to Jack, Theresa May said: "Your fantastic work on A Million Hands is mobilising half a million Scouts to volunteer and creating a vibrant community of young people whose service will have a positive impact on the UK for years to come."

The award came as a complete surprise to Jack. "I am absolutely honoured to be receiving a Points of Light award," he said. "I did not expect it in the slightest."

After thanking fellow Scouts and other volunteers, Jack did not forget the support he has received closer to home in Enfield.

"I'd like to thank my mum for limitless support, which means the world to me, the Scout Association and all the wonderful charities I have the privilege to work with and to everyone who has helped and supported me along the way," he added.

Cloudy2Clear Announce Trusted Trader Partnership

ADVERTORIAL

Consumer champions Which? have now joined the thousands of customers who recognise that Cloudy2Clear Windows really are a business that you can TRUST. The company which specialises in repairing windows which are steamed up, broken or damaged by replacing the panes – not the frames has received the coveted 'Which Trusted Trader' status after going through a rigorous accreditation process entirely focussed on customer service.

Group Managing Director Marcus McGee believes that Which? have endorsed Cloudy2Clear's long standing company policy of delivering the highest standards possible at all times. "Our service is simple. If your double glazing has misted up we can replace the glass at a fraction of the cost of a new window, in any type of frame, and with a new 25 year guarantee. But it's not just about saving people money, although that obviously helps. Whilst a number of tradespeople perhaps don't focus on customer care as much as they should do, we make sure we turn up when we say we will, do the job the customer requires and leave their house as clean as a whistle.

Locally Cloudy2Clear service the Enfield, Edmonton, Palmers Green, Winchmore Hill & Southgate areas and manager Richard Power agrees that this approach is a major factor in his success. "The truth is that it's not just the personal satisfaction that I get from doing a good job but also it makes good business sense. I get a huge amount of business from friends and family of people I've done work for, which just goes to show how much a little bit of effort is appreciated as both my customers and, obviously a body as nationally important as Which? now recognise."

Serving up some drama

By Clare Casey
newsdesk@nlhnews.co.uk

FANCY a bit of theatre with your omelette? Then head to Malone & Co – a new community cafe where drama, comedy and music events happen as you eat.

The cafe opened in Burleigh Way, Enfield Town, eight weeks ago and is the brainchild of chef Kwaku Appiah, 44, who has run the cafe in Jacksons Lane, a multi-arts venue in Highgate, and others in Highgate Woods, Bristol and Weston-super-Mare – “they’re suspicious of anything except burgers,” he jokes.

Kwaku’s been waiting five years for the building, just behind Starbucks, to be completed and he has a long list of young people signed up to do an NVQ in food production there.

He wants to “give back” to the community and let the drama students have a go, acting out scenes from films including The Shawshank Redemption and Gone with the Wind.

Kwaku grew up in Tottenham and used to hang about after school looking for something to do. He stumbled on a cookery class for adults and was finally allowed to join after charming the grown-ups.

He said: “I discovered something I was really good at and something I really liked. I was a DJ for years and then got ripped off so decided to become a chef.

“I could have made a lot of money from it, if I’d wanted, but it’s about the socialising for me and the sharing of ideas and food.

“I like people. That’s why I always have open kitchens so I can see what’s going on and get out into the front of house.”

Over the next few weeks he’ll be starting a breakfast club, where kids can go in, do their homework and get a good healthy meal that won’t break the bank.

The NVQ students will gain vital skills in the kitchen and be sent out to the marketplace in the town to try their social skills.

He added: “It’s no good if you’re a great cook, but can’t relate to people, so I make them do front of house, too. We’re getting a market stall selling puddings to eat there or take away.

“They offered me a job in The Dorchester once, but they work in silence and I need music to function, anything from Tibetan Monk music to Jay Z and I’m happy!”

Parades pay tribute on Remembrance Sunday

THIS year's Remembrance Day on Sunday, November 13, will be marked by three parades in Enfield, Edmonton and Southgate.

The Edmonton parade will gather at the Plevna Road car park, behind Edmonton Green, at 9.30am, where it will be addressed by the mayor of Enfield Bernadette Lappage before moving to the war memorial at the front of the green.

A 20-minute Remembrance Sunday service will precede the two minutes' silence at 11am.

The parade will finish 30 minutes later when guests and the public are invited to make their way to The Lamb pub, in Church Street, for a post-parade buffet, which will end at 1pm.

The Enfield Town parade will meet at 1.45pm at the back of the Royal British Legion, in Holtwhites Hill, and Chase Side Primary School, in Trinity Street.

At 2.30pm, the parade will march to Chase Green war memorial for a service and the laying of wreaths before marching to Enfield Town marketplace where dignitaries will salute the marchers.

After passing Enfield Civic Centre, in Silver Street, the parade will return to the Royal British Legion where a buffet will be available.

The Southgate parade will assemble at 10.15am in Tudor Way and march from Southgate Circus roundabout along High Street towards St Andrew's Church. A commemorative event at 11am will be followed by a reception and speeches at the Royal British Legion in Nursery Road.

Doug Taylor, the leader of Enfield Council, said, "Across the borough, the people of Enfield will pay tribute to those who paid the ultimate price in times of war – the brave people who took the risks to preserve the values of a free country. It is at these times that we can be united in giving thanks for their courage, recognising their incalculable contribution to our way of life."

'Exciting': Councillor Alan Sitkin at Montagu Industrial Estate

'This is regeneration for the 21st century'

By Priya Kingsley-Adam

priya.kingsley-adam@nlhnews.co.uk

PLANS are in the pipeline to breathe new life into an Edmonton industrial estate and turn it into a high-tech business hub.

The Montagu Industrial Estate, north of the A406 North Circular Road, is set to be transformed into a thriving business and commercial site which will create new jobs.

A range of accommodation, which will be an "accessible and vibrant estate," is also planned to be built as part of the regeneration work.

The proposals were agreed by Enfield Council last month and the council is in the process of setting up a partnership group to take on the project.

Alan Sitkin, cabinet member for economic regeneration and business, said: "This exciting new project will see new life and vibrancy breathed into one of our older industrial estates, making it fit for the future and able to support high-tech industries in the 21st century.

"This work will bolster our aim, which is to help lift the wards in the area out of the most deprived in the United Kingdom. We will do this by stimulating industry and creating jobs."

What's on and what's coming

By Russ Lawrence

russ.lawrence@nlhnews.co.uk

"COME on Marlene. Let the dog see the rabbit."

It's for his role as Del Boy's pal, Boycie, the shifty used car salesman in Only Fools and Horses, that actor John Challis is perhaps best known, although many will remember the spin off-series The Green Green Grass with his character's wife Marlene.

Recognisable by his trademark 'tache, the comedy actor with more than 50 years' experience in showbusiness appears in Only Fools and Boycie at Wylyotts Theatre, in Darkes Lane, Potters Bar, on Friday evening.

It's an intimate evening in which the 74-year-old actor reveals secrets about the BBC TV sitcom which made him a household name.

Not only does he spill the beans about co-stars David Jason and Nicholas Lyndhurst, but he also tells hilarious stories and anecdotes about other performers he has worked with including The Beatles and The Rolling Stones, Oliver Reed and George Best.

The show is interspersed with old video clips of other TV classics in which he has appeared including Citizen Smith, Open All Hours and Doctor Who.

And Challis is still appearing on TV having reprised the role of Captain Peacock in the BBC's remake of the classic comedy Are You Being Served?

His career musings offer a fascinating insight into the past, taking the audience on a nostalgic trip down memory lane showing how Only Fools and Horses became a British institution in the social context of the time.

The show also celebrates the publication of the second volume of Challis's autobiography, Being Boycie, and he will be signing copies during the interval and after his performance during a meet 'n' greet.

It starts at 8pm and tickets (£16) are available from the box office on 01707 645005.

Dressed to thrill

NOCTURNAL ANIMALS (15, 117 mins)

THE lies we tell ourselves are often more damaging than those we fashion for the people we love.

This art of personal deception is practised with élan by characters in designer Tom Ford's second film – an impeccably tailored and gripping psychological thriller based on the novel Tony And Susan by Austin Wright.

If Ford's impressive, Oscar-nominated debut, A Single Man, was emotionally cool, Nocturnal Animals reduces the temperature to sub-zero as an unhappily married woman relives – with a shudder – the betrayal that destroyed the only loyal and openly loving person in her life.

The writer-director employs a simple yet effective film-within-a-film structure, ricocheting between metallic, minimalist reality and sun-baked, sweat-stained fiction with aplomb. In both strands, innately good, yet tortured, protagonists reach crossroads and the agonised choices they make will gnaw at their souls for the rest of their days.

Ford's impeccable eye for detail is in evidence in every frame and he toys repeatedly with notions of beauty as his stylish, social climber heroine reluctantly acknowledges the ugliness that lurks beneath her designer labels and flawless make-up.

Los Angeles gallery owner Susan Morrow (Amy Adams) stages provocative exhibitions, which elicit coos of appreciation from her pals Alessia (Andrea Riseborough) and Carlos (Michael Sheen), but are – by her own admission – emotionally numb.

That's also a succinct description for her marriage to philandering businessman Hutton (Armie Hammer), whose financial woes impact on the gallery's future.

Out of the blue, Susan receives a manuscript from her first husband, Edward (Jake Gyllenhaal), whose sweet nature and humble Texan origins jarred with her monstrous mother, Anne (Laura Linney).

"The things you love about him now, in a few years, you will hate," sneers Anne to her daughter in a flashback.

Susan and Edward haven't spoken in 19 years, so his communication is both intriguing and unsettling.

With Hutton away on business, Susan devours the pages of Edward's manuscript and in her mind's eye, she imagines Tony Hastings, his wife Laura (Isla Fisher) and teenage daughter India (Ellie Bamber) taking a late-night drive.

On an empty stretch of desert highway, the family is terrorised by Ray Marcus (Aaron Taylor-Johnson) and his buddies.

Laura and India are abducted and local detective Bobby Andes (Michael Shannon) supports Tony as the husband discovers the women's horrifying fate.

Nocturnal Animals serves up a dish of revenge with measured restraint, bolstered by powerhouse performances from Adams and Gyllenhaal.

Buckinghamshire-born co-star Taylor-Johnson is truly menacing and Ford sadistically cranks up tension until we, like Susan, are helpless to glimpse into the heart of darkness of Edward's manuscript.

Cinematographer Seamus McGarvey creates distinct colour palettes and textures for the two narratives, including an opening credits sequence that challenges our perception of the body beautiful head-on.

Making Sure Your Property Gets The Exposure It Deserves

Seeing You And Your Home As A One-Off

Your home means so much to you. You've poured time and effort into making it the place you return to at the end of a long day; the place where you entertain good friends; maybe raised a family. Ultimately, it's the place where you can just be you. We totally get this. And we think about these details when we start building your marketing plan. There's no one-size fits all, here; we look at every property and every seller as a one-off.

Picking Out The Details That Others Miss

We'll pick out the details that speak to buyers' hearts, as well as their heads. It might be the beautiful original ceiling rose that you thought only you loved; maybe it's the secret nook where you can escape with a good book for an hour; or maybe it's just the way the morning sun floods the kitchen during breakfast time. When we promote your property, it will be with all these details in mind.

Online

Over 80% of property searches start online now, so getting your home on our market-leading, mobile-friendly website is a priority. We'll make sure it is seen on all the other major property websites too, such as Rightmove, Zoopla and PrimeLocation.

In Print

There's nothing like a beautiful brochure, packed with gorgeous photographs and carefully written copy to inspire a buyer. Our unique style of photography and special approach to writing your property description will bring your property to life.

Advertising

It's a given. We'll place your property in the right local publications and consider it for national advertising in publications like Country Life, the Sunday Times and the Financial Times. Rely on us to attract the right audience for your home.

And Then There's Us. . .

OK, so maybe it's not the most glamorous marketing tool, but our network is possibly the most powerful of all. Every office works closely with its neighbouring Winkworth businesses, sharing properties and buyers and packing a real punch with their combined marketing. And the network is connected by our shared software, which we actively scour to match homes with buyers, even if they're currently at opposite ends of the country.

So, if you're thinking of selling or letting your property, or maybe you're just interested in knowing what it's worth nowadays.. we would love to hear from you.

Mazda 6 goes the distance

By Laura Thomson

AT first glance, not much appears to have changed on the Mazda 6 – apart from a few styling tweaks, it is near identical to its predecessor.

And it's little wonder. First introduced for the 2014 model year, before being updated for 2016, you could be forgiven for wondering why Mazda has once again modified the 6.

However, in this instance, it is very much a case of what's inside that counts.

Mazda's G-Vectoring Control (GVC) – the manufacturer's own torque distribution kit – makes a debut on the D-segment model, promising to smooth corners and improve driving satisfaction.

Meanwhile, new systems within the pre-existing Skyactiv-D powertrains deliver added responsiveness, while reducing engine noise. Following an image revamp in 2015, little remained to be updated on the 6.

From the outside, it is an eye-pleasing model, with flowing lines joining together in Mazda's signature grille, which is flanked by a sharp LED lighting signature.

In the cabin, several enhancements are seen, including a redesigned steering wheel, fresh instrument dials and chrome effects on tactile components such as the glovebox.

One of the enhancements likely to go unnoticed, but which shows Mazda's appreciation of customer feedback, is the improved quality of the front seatback pockets, aiming to prevent wear.

Similarly to its previous guise, the cabin of the Mazda 6 boasts a premium feel, which belies its reasonable price.

Space is plentiful with the 6, both in sedan and wagon form. Front and back passengers can sit in comfort and while the estate's 522-litre boot may not be able to compete with other models in its class, it is, nonetheless, adequate.

A host of technology as standard – much of which was available on the previous model – makes the 6 not only comfortable to drive, but safe and practical as well. This includes a forward-sensing camera, through which the car's advanced smart city brake support and smart brake support operate.

The hotly anticipated GVC system uses engine torque to generate deceleration g-force, which in turn shifts the load to the car's driven front wheels, increasing front tyre grip to boost responsiveness.

As long as the driver maintains a constant angle through the bend, the GVC then restores acceleration engine torque, transferring the load back to the rear wheels.

Effectively, it gives the Mazda 6 a smoother and more stable drive than ever before.

Another thing the GVC will do, Mazda claims, is improve passenger comfort at high speeds, as fewer steering corrections are required to keep on path.

We can't help but agree that the model does feel noticeably stable on the motorway, which, combined with the comfortable ride, makes it an ideal long distance wagon.

On looks alone, the 2017 Mazda 6 would not be worth the premium over any previous guise.

However, when the extensive engine tech is taken into consideration, the model becomes one of the most technologically equipped in its price range.

The Mazda 6 price range starts at £19,795 for the saloon, with the 2.2 Skyactiv-D Tourer in SE-L trim priced at £24,795.

DIER: WE WILL BOUNCE BACK

By Dominique Stafford

sport.enfield@nlhnews.co.uk

ERIC DIER insists that it is only a matter of time before Tottenham Hotspur get back to winning ways as they prepare to host Bayer Leverkusen at Wembley Stadium in the Champions League tonight.

Although Spurs remain unbeaten in the Premier League, Saturday's 1-1 stalemate at home to champions Leicester was their third successive draw in the league and extended their winless streak to five matches in all competitions.

The versatile Dier, who is currently filling in at centre-back for the injured Toby Alderweireld, expressed his frustration that the side once again failed to turn a dominant display into maximum points – but he remains adamant that it will not be long until they get back to winning ways as they prepare for a crucial week, which sees them following tonight's game by visiting bitter rivals Arsenal in the league on Sunday.

"It's very frustrating," he said. "We controlled the game from start to finish and we knew what Leicester were going to do. We know their style, so we're very disappointed because we didn't create more chances and didn't score enough goals."

"Every chance they had came from us and we have to limit the mistakes we make, because it led to their chances."

"We'll keep playing, keep improving the way we play, try to get better and try to start winning games, because we're drawing too many."

"We're playing well and it's just a matter of time before it all comes together. We need to kill off games, but this is football. We know what we have to do, now we just have to do it."

Dier added: "This is a big week for us. Bayer Leverkusen is a massive game. We have two home matches left in the Champions League and we have to win them both."

"We're still unbeaten in the Premier League, we're positive and we're looking forward to the week."

Saturday's match saw summer signing Vincent Janssen put Spurs ahead from the spot, but they were unable to hold on to their lead and Ahmed Musa's goal early in the second half saw Leicester pick up their first away point of the season.

"We tried, tried and tried and it was difficult," said manager Mauricio Pochettino. "There were a lot of positives, but it's hard when you do everything to try and win the game to then only take one point."

"We need to be positive. It's true we're disappointed after that game, but in football if you make a mistake sometimes you pay for it. It was hard for us, but we paid for the only mistake we made."

"It's hard but we need to be positive after ten games. We've got five wins and five draws and we need to keep going."

"In football bad periods sometimes happen and we're in a bad period, but we're still unbeaten – and that is very important. Now we have two very important games ahead – Leverkusen and then Arsenal – and we need to be strong."

Staying positive: Eric Dier remains upbeat over Tottenham's prospects for the rest of the season

Skolars begin to put squad together

THE London Skolars have re-signed four key players as they begin to put their squad together ahead of the new rugby league season.

Aaron Smalls, Eddie Mbaraga, Charlie Lawrence and Ryan Chester have all committed their futures to the club for 2017 as the Skolars look to build on an encouraging campaign in Kingstone Press Championship One last time around.

Smalls came through the Skolars' junior ranks and made his debut for the first team on the wing in 2010, but he eventually moved to Hemel Stags in search of more regular playing time.

However, head coach Jermaine Coleman brought him back to the Skolars in 2015 and he has established himself as a key member of the side since then, missing only a handful of games due to injury over the past two seasons.

Like Smalls, Mbaraga is a graduate from the Skolars' junior ranks who decided to move on – in his case to the North London Stags – to further his career.

After three years away, he returned to the Skolars for the 2016 campaign and ended the season as one of their leading try scorers.

Lawrence is a product of the London Broncos' youth side who moved to the Skolars earlier this year. He is comfortable at both hooker and half-back and has a strong kicking game.

Chester was voted the coaches' player of the year at the end of the 2016 season following a terrific first campaign with the club.

An England student international, Chester made his name with the Hemel Stags before making the move to the Skolars.

A club spokesman said: "Often starting in the 13 shirt, Chester regularly topped the tackle chart, playing huge minutes and doing all of the often unseen work that allows the flair players to flourish."

"His Herculean efforts were rewarded with the coaches' player of the year accolade, while he came close to being named players' player of the year as well."

The quartet follow in the footsteps of Dave Williams, who re-signed for the club last week.

Borough survive late scare to seal win

HARINGEY BOROUGH survived a late onslaught from visiting Tilbury to claim a 3-2 victory in Saturday's clash in Ryman League Division One North.

The hosts started the match in positive fashion and a Rakim Richards header was superbly saved by Tilbury keeper Lee Butcher before they did take the lead on five minutes through Ramil Sheriff.

And it did not take the hosts long to double their advantage as they struck again six minutes later – Ralston Gabriel collecting possession on the edge of the box and firing into the net.

However, the visitors responded well to this and pulled a goal back in the 13th minute when Reece Hewitt's corner was headed home by Peddie.

Tilbury's Neil Richmond had a goal ruled out for offside soon after, but Richards was then again thwarted by Butcher in spectacular fashion as the keeper somehow managed to palm his effort on to the bar.

Butcher made another fine save to deny Gabriel, but Borough did add a third on 33 minutes when Coby Rowe rose high to head home unchallenged from a corner.

The visitors continued to carry a threat in attack though and they again reduced their deficit in the 51st minute when Kurt Smith scored from the spot after he had been pushed in the box.

Both teams still attacked with purpose as the end-to-end nature of the contest continued and Butcher excelled again six minutes from time as he tipped over an Ashley Taylor-Forbes drive.

Moments later Tilbury were handed a golden opportunity to get back on level terms when they were awarded another penalty after Jaydon Charles was bundled over in the box. Smith again took the spot kick, but he was unable to find the target on this occasion as his effort flew wide.

The visitors poured forward in the closing stages as they searched for an equaliser, but Borough were able to hold firm – with keeper Harry Palmer making one terrific save in stoppage time to ensure that they secured maximum points.

Haringey Borough make the trip to Soham Town Rangers on Saturday (3pm).

'I wanted to gain the skills and experience to make this my career'

Here's what some of this year's new Pre-Apprentices in Accounting had to say about why they chose vocational training over academic study.

"My teacher used to be an accountant and inspired me to try it out, and thought I might be able to teach it one day. I'm enjoying my Apprenticeship and The Accountancy Academy will really enhance my skills to get me a good job."

Khairunnisa Hussain, 18

"I chose this course because I want to work on the railway. This is a really great opportunity for young people and leads to an excellent career. I'm very interested in mechanical engineering and in five years"

Yusuf Naing, 20
